Subflow

You define a subflow to provide a common sequence of actions to be used by several message flows, applications, or integration services. You can include subflows in your message flows in the same way as you include nodes.

Library

A library is a logical grouping of related code, data, or both. A library typically contains reusable helper routines and resources such as subflows, ESQL modules, message definitions, maps, and Java utilities